Mountain Valley Hospice Supports EMT Training

(Mount Airy, NC), Mountain Valley announces support for aspiring Emergency Medical Technician candidates by offering to cover the cost of training and certification.

“We will pay for the 6-month basic training certification from one of our local community colleges if you commit to work for Mountain Valley for at least one year following completion of the program and certification,” said Angie Cagle, chief human relations officer for Mountain Valley. “And while in training, we’ll also offer EMT students a 20-hour per week job.”

Mountain Valley’s transport unit provides hospice patients with comfortable, safe and reliable transportation to and from their home, hospital or our hospice care centers. Providing our own transport service is just one of the many ways we strive to meet our mission to create the best experience for every patient, every family, every time.

Mountain Valley encourages all interested candidates to check with their local community college for EMT certification programs and registration.

For more information about student employment at Mountain Valley while enrolled in an EMT certification program at a local community college, call 1-888-789-2922.
